

Sharing Projects

Project creation and configuration need to be performed only once. After one team member creates and configures a project, it can be checked into source control, then reused by all developers working on the code.

For details on sharing the project with source control, see Sharing Projects and Test Assets Through Source Control.